Two Kinds - Amy Tan

Reading Check:

•	Whom does the narrator's mother want her to be like?
•	list details that you learned about the mother below:
Readir	ng Comprehension Questions
1.	What are the titles of the pieces in the Schumann book that the daughter plays at the end of the story? In what ways do the titles and pieces reflect the daughter's feelings about herself?
2.	Do you agree that people can be anything they want to be? Why or why not? Should the narrator's mother have pushed the daughter as she did? Explain. How might the story be different if it was told from the mother's point of view?
3.	In what ways does the mother pressured her daughter for change? How does the difference in their attitude create problems? Support your answer with details from the text.

Reflection Questions
1	1.	How has your family's history affected your life? How will your life affect your family's history?
2	2.	What does your family dream of for you? What do you want for yourself? What happens when what your family dreams of for you conflicts with what you want for yourself?